CLASS

OF

Mr. Charles Markham

Mr. Markham leaves this June with 37 years of teaching at North Reading High School. His never-ending patience and love for mathematics made him one of the most valuable teachers in the school. His dedication to his job and his students earned him the respect of students and faculty alike. Mr. Markham looks forward to traveling and golfing next year. Best of Luck, Mr. Markham!

Mr. Harry Lucier

After 27 years of teaching science at North Reading High School, Mr. Lucier will retire this June. His genuine concern for all his students and his easy-going disposition made him loved by all. Mr. Lucier plans to continue teaching on a part-time basis next year at UMASS-Lowell and Northern Essex Community College. Best of Luck, Mr. Lucier!

FACULTY

Dr. William Butler

Through our high school years, the Class of 1997 has laughed, cried, succeeded, failed, confronted our fears, and reached for our dreams. We would like to thank Dr. Butler and Mr. Pesce for their continual support and guidance. Their dedication enabled us to attain our goals and become graduates prepared to face the world around us. All that we have experienced and shared would not have been possible without them. They are the foundation from which four years of memories will last a lifetime.

Thank You.

Who's who in 1997

IF you think watching a political debate has all the charm of watching the wind blow, if you believe the only honest politician, or if you understand why 94 percent of the voters in a town like North Andover failed to vote in the last election, Donna Ann Cuomo has a remedy for you.

It is this: women Rep Cuomo was

Class Superlatives

of course, best known as the person who transformed a personal tragedy into a powerful voice on behalf of crime victims rights as both a private citizen and as a legislator. But, earlier this month at a panel on "Making Democracy Work" the North Andover Republican was championing a different cause.

"We really need many more women involved in politics," she told the crowd.

I got ecstatic
I grew distraught
I recalled my memories,
I got lost in thought
Everything's beginning,
Everything's ending.

We forge on,
Trying not to look back
Cry over what's lost,
Form a new plan of attack.
The foam starts to diminish
As the wave begins to rise,
In my mind it's already finished,
But that's just a lie.
It's all beginning,
Just as it comes to an end

It never stops,
This continuous cycle,
Of progressing and regressing
In an endless circle
Light christens one opportunity
As darkness makes others cold,
It's all beginning,
As it draws to a close.
